AGRICULTURAL ROLLER SHUTTERS

OUR PROMISE. YOUR PROTECTION.

Introduction

Whether it's a machinery barn or a grain store, your farm needs agricultural security to ensure that your buildings aren't broken into, keeping your assets safe and protected.

There are many ways of improving the security of your farm, we've picked just some of the best agricultural security tips that will help to prevent theft and secure your farm. High visibility we offer an extensive range of steel roller shutters for business.

Install CCTV

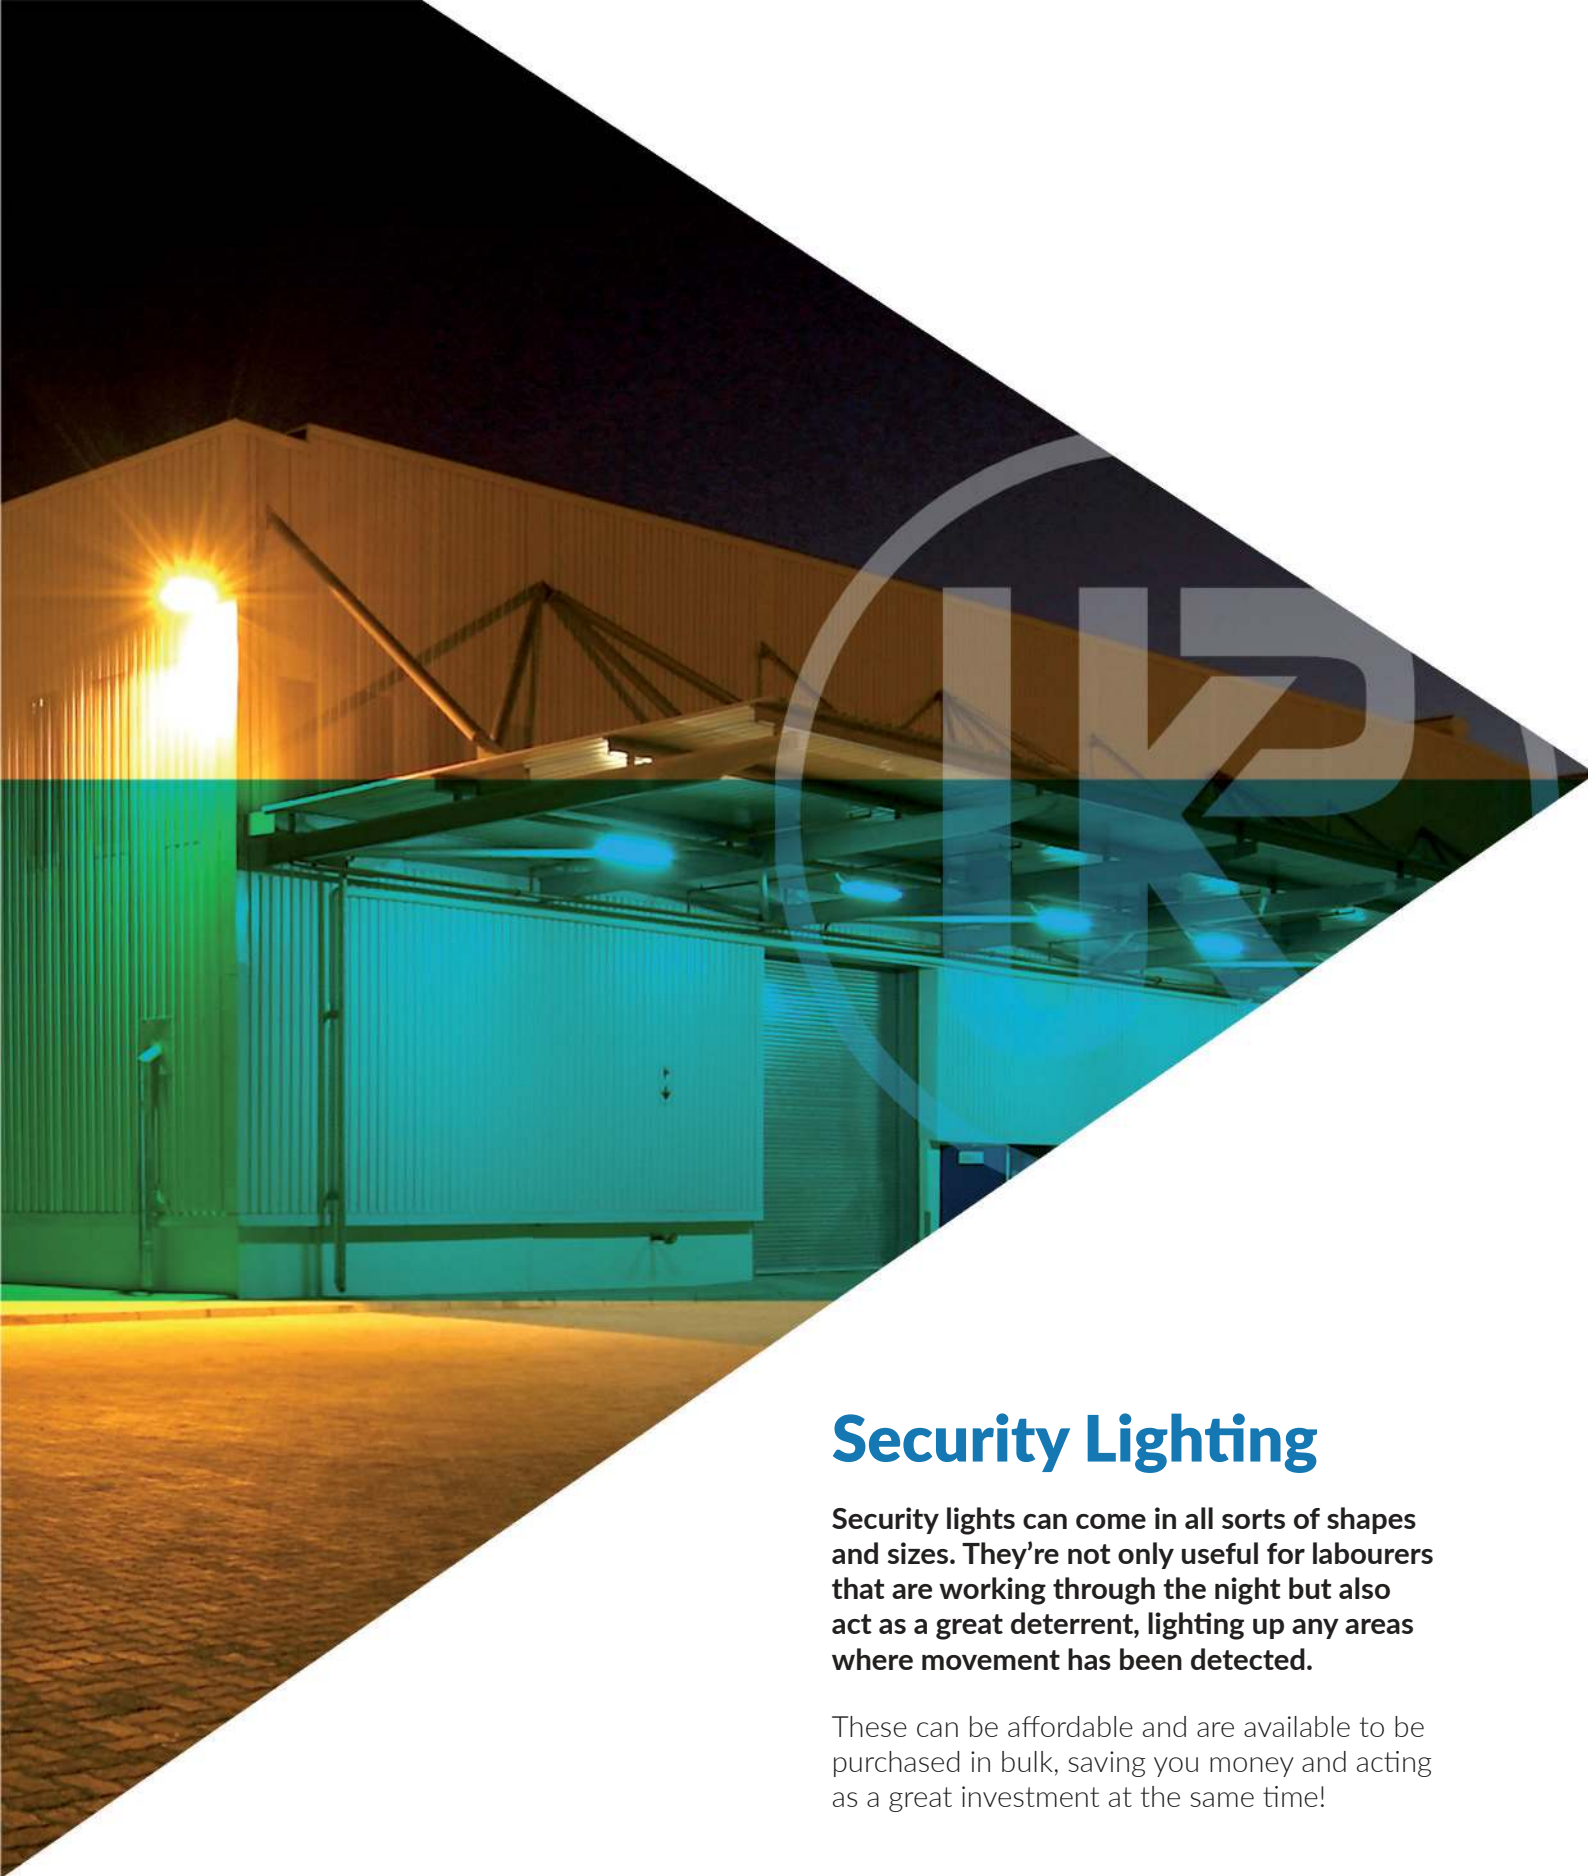

CCTV is a must if you're looking to improve the security of your agricultural estate or farm. As technology has advanced, CCTV and remote cameras have become much more affordable. By installing a CCTV system, if anything is taken you'll be able to identify the culprit and have hard evidence against them.

Installing these cameras can also deter potential thieves, if they spot the camera they're much less likely to plan to break-in. You can even purchase "dummy" cameras which work to deter thieves and look like real cameras when in fact they're just models.

Security Lighting

Security lights can come in all sorts of shapes and sizes. They're not only useful for labourers that are working through the night but also act as a great deterrent, lighting up any areas where movement has been detected.

These can be affordable and are available to be purchased in bulk, saving you money and acting as a great investment at the same time!

Clear Signage

Make sure to put signs up, making it clear that your farm doesn't welcome trespassers and hunting as well as dangerous dogs as these could harm your livestock. People are often stopped by these signs however if ignored, the fact you have clear signs can act as good defense if they choose to break-in and attempt to get away with the theft.

Most signage is affordable and easy to purchase from a range of stores. "No Entry", "No Trespassers", "No Dogs Off Leads" as well as many other generic signs can be found in DIY shops such as B&Q.

Roller Shutters

Agricultural roller shutters can be a great option, adding an extra layer of defense against theft & potential break-ins. You can even purchase police accredited roller shutters with a range of security ratings. Protecting machinery and crops as well as livestock can be hard, but these assets are valuable and they need to be kept secure.

With steel sliding barn doors and roller shutters you can be sure that your barns, stores and other agricultural buildings are kept locked down, preventing burglary. UK Roller Shutters have a great range of secure doors that are perfect for agricultural applications. These roller shutters and barn doors are made to measure, so whatever the size of the aperture you need to cover, we'll have the right solution for you.

Burglar Alarm System Installation

Installing burglar alarms onto your buildings can be a great way of putting potential burglars off. By seeing the alarm box on the outside of a building, thieves are far less likely to attack.

These can be a great investment and some insurers may even ask that it's necessary for you to install these due to the amount of high value items you're storing around the barn. Alarms when triggered by intruders also work perfectly to scare criminals, encouraging them to leave empty handed.

Limit Access Routes

All entrances must be protected with a gateway, these will hinder people entering your land with vehicles. These can act as a great way of limiting access to your farm, both in the daytime and at night.

You could even attach the signs mentioned previously in this guide to the gates to enforce that point that you're actively limiting trespassers. There are a wide range of gates available for farms and agricultural applications, depending on your price range. Be sure to secure these gates with high security padlocks to stop people attempting to bypass the gate.
